Christiania, October 1.

WE have received from Drontheim, by the Way of Bergen, the following Relation of the late Invasion of the Swedes. The Enemy having (after this so favourable a Season for them, which has not been the like for many Years) made continual Marches and Countermarches upon our Frontiers, in Order to cut off our Communication with that City; but finding all the Avenues very well guarded, they appear'd on the 12th past in the Morning before Fort Steen; and having immediately pass'd the River Suile, which was at that time quite dry, both Horse and Foot pass'd by our Barricade, and advanc'd Northwards by Mediaglia; Major General Budde caus'd the Soldiers that lay in the Retrenchment to retire, that they might not be cut off: But perceiving that the Number of the Enemy hourly increas'd, and that they pass'd the River without Interruption, the General caus'd Companies of Soldiers to march to the Bridge, to hinder their Passage; but when they saw the Enemy advanc'd, they retired without making any Opposition. When the Enemy had pass'd the River, our Dragoons were sent against them, and attack'd them in the Flank and Rear. In the mean time, Major General Budde caus'd Colonel Meintzer to march with the Infantry to secure the Retreat of the Dragoons, but as the Enemy were too strong for them, they were oblig'd to fight their Way through; which however oblig'd the Enemy to halt. Hereby the General gain'd Time to draw together the Troop that were dispers'd in several Places, and posted himself with them in the North-Dal by the Veer, to have Drontheim behind him: And considering the Enemy were very much stronger than we our loss in those Actions was very inconsiderable, for we had only one Captain of the Company of Life Guards kill'd, and 2 small Pieces of Cannon, which by the quitting Fort Steen fell into the Enemy's Hands. Colonel Mylefort, who was posted near Burum and Redstad, retired in good Order and without Loss. And Major General Budde intrench'd himself with all his Troops and the Peasants that were come in to him, to wait the attack of the Enemy.

Warsaw, Oct. 15. Letters from Grodno of the 12th Instant mention, that the new Marshal propos'd on the 10th to the Assembly of the Nobility in the Diet, if they thought fit, to concur with the Senate, and welcome the King upon his Return into the Kingdom. To which the Deputies of Volhinia and other Waywodships made Opposition, and desir'd that nothing at all might be enter'd upon before the Russians were withdrawn out of the Kingdom. But nevertheless the Majority of the Diet agreed to it, and join'd themselves to the Senate, to compliment his Majesty, and on that Occasion, by the Mouth of the Marshal, besought his Majesty, that the Russian Troops might be oblig'd to depart the Kingdom. To which the Crown Upper Chancellor answer'd from the Throne, That the King was ready to give the Republick such reasonable Satisfaction, provided they will on their Side contribute to it. Afterwards the Pacta Conventa were read, and the Assembly adjourn'd to the next Day. Being then met again, the Marshal represented to them, that the Offices of Crown Treasurers, and the Upper Treasurer, must be declar'd vacant, by reason that they lay in many Cases fallen into Differences with one another. Prince Radziville also demanded that the Office of the Catholick Chief General might be declar'd vacant, and having enter'd a Protest thereupon, went out of the Senate, wherefore the Marshal sent some Deputies to pacify him, who prevail'd upon him to return, that the Business of the Diet might not be interrupted; and then some Deputies seconded the Demand of that Prince; the Session was thereupon adjourn'd to the 12th. In the mean time, several of the principal Nobility being not yet come, having neglected to attend, upon a Belief that the Diet would not assemble, or at least be adjourn'd, which there was great Reason to believe; it begins to be imagin'd, that it will be proroug'd to the Month of May next.

Hague, Oct. 25. The Empetour's Envoy has remonstrated, in a Conference to the Deputies of the States, the Applications that have been made for some Months past at the Court of Madrid, as their High Mightinesses cannot but know, to induce them to accept the Plan of Accommodation projected for the Repose of Europe; to which he added, that it was to have been hoped that that Court would, by the Defeat of the Spanish Fleet, have conceived pacifick Thoughts; but far from that, he was advis'd, that Orders from thence are given at Amsterdam, for buying up all sorts of Ammunition, Shipping, and Naval Stores; That in Consequence thereof, a Ship mounted with 24 Guns, and laden with 6000 Cannon Bullets, was actually departed for Leghorn; That a certain Merchant had a Commission to build five Men of War against March next, of 34 to 60 Guns each; that others have Orders to buy or build several Ships carrying 40 to 54 Guns each, and to buy also Masts, Canvass, and all sorts of Cordage. By which it appears, that the Court of Madrid pretends to reestablish their Fleet, and push on the War next Year, for further disturbing the Affairs of Europe. That he thought fit to give their High Mightinesses Notice of this, that as good Friends of his Imperial Majesty, they may please to hinder the Transport of Counterband Goods to Spain, as long as the present Differences with that Crown continue. That he (the Envoy) would not detain the Deputies, to remonstrate to them, that by natural Right, and by the Law of Nations, there is Authority for hindering the Transport of Contraband Goods to Enemies, especially if such Enemies are the Aggressors; also the Treaties of Commerce, authorize that Prohibition, and the frequent Declarations and Prohibitions of this State in relation to the War in the North, sufficiently plead for his Imperial Majesty on this Point. That this State has at all times concern'd itself in the common Interest, which being sensibly affected in the present Crisis, his Imperial Majesty will look upon all that their High Mightinesses shall think proper to order for hindering the transport of Contraband Goods to Spanish Ports, or others possess'd by the Enemy, as a Mark of their sincere Amity. And in the mean time, that they will please to consider (as it is hoped they speedily will) in the safe, prudent, and salutary Measures, which are already taken for securing the Repose of Europe, &c. The Deputies of Holland and Zealand will carry to their Principals the Report of this Conference, and it is at present under the Examination of the Deputies for Foreign Affairs.
